A Summer Trip

John : Where shall we go for our summer holiday this year?

Frank : I think we should go to San Francisco. We've never been there before, and there are a lot of new places to go to. What do you think, Chris?

Chris : I don't really want to be in a city during the summer. I want to get out into nature.

John : Same here. Let's get away from the rat race altogether. What about going camping in the Sierra Mountains? We can rent a cabin in the mountains. The lakes and trees are so beautiful this time of year.

Chris : Camping? Carry a heavy pack on my back for a whole week? I need a good rest after a hard year's work.

Frank : So do I. Well, how about a camping holiday at the beach? That'd be relaxing ... and cheap, too. We could afford to stay for two weeks instead of only one week.

Chris : But what if it rains? A leaking tent's not my idea of fun, and you've got to take so many things with you. A camping holiday isn't really very comfortable, you know.

John : Well, why don't we go on a tour of the coast?

Frank : That's a good idea. We could fly to San Francisco, rent a car or van, and drive down to Los Angeles. I hear the scenery is really powerful.

Chris : But how much would that cost? I don't know if I have that much! Plus, all that driving would hardly be relaxing.

John : I've got another idea. If we rent a small cabin by the sea, we can swim and laze around all day and have a comfortable place to stay. Cabins aren't all that expensive, you know.

Chris : But what if we rent one that we've never seen before, and it's really terrible? Old and dirty. Maybe we're better off just staying home.
